Subject: Rural Business Enterprise Grant Secured to Establish an Angoon Small Business Development Center in 2007-2008

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
September 10, 2007

Rural Business Enterprise Grant Secured to Establish a Small Business Development Center in Angoon

The Business and Economic Development Department of the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska (Central Council), in partnership with Kootznoowoo, Inc., Angoon Tribal Council and the Angoon City Council, has successfully secured a Rural Business Enterprise grant with USDA Rural Development to establish a Small Business Development Center in Angoon in 2007-2008.

The newly funded project will provide technical assistance and e-commerce education to local entrepreneurs. It will furnish one-on-one individual counseling to small businesses and potential business owners in areas such as pre-business planning, developing business plans, and credit practices among others.

The project will also create a computer classroom with high-speed Internet connection and distance-learning capability. The computer classroom and distance learning component will be used for small business training, technical assistance, one-on-one counseling, and professional education. There is a possibility for a partnership with the Vocational Training & Resource Center (VTRC) in Juneau, which is a Central Council subsidiary, to broadcast some of its classes to Angoon. Additionally, local residents will be able to use the classroom to sell their arts and services online; non-profit and community organizations from Juneau will be able to broadcast webinars and other events to Angoon with a click of a button.

The Small Business Development Technician position that the project will create in Angoon, and the e-commerce and distance learning center will be supported by the grant, and by the Central Council, Angoon City Council, Kootznoowoo, Inc., and the Angoon Tribal Council.

An outcome-oriented performance metrics will be adopted for this project. During the first 12-month period, the Center will achieve the following results:

- Deliver 175 hours of face-to-face counseling.
- Help clients obtain $500,000 or more of capital support (SBA loans, traditional bank loans, credit enhanced loans, etc.)
- Host 10 workshops on small business-related and e-commerce-related topics and conduct at least 5 distance learning events.
- Make the distance learning capability accessible to non-profits, tribal entities, and other business and economic development organizations to conduct educational events in the community.
- Make the computer classroom available to local residents to market and sell their products and services online, for a reasonable fee.

The Small Business Development Center in Angoon is but the first step in the Central Council's plan to support business development in the region. If the project is successful, Central Council's Business and Economic Development Department will continue working with interested Tribal Governments and other local organizations to roll out a network of such Centers in other tribal communities. The project will result in development of small and emerging private business enterprise in our region. It will give people skills and access to resources that are necessary to take advantage of existing opportunities for small business development.

We are always looking for opportunities to build partnerships with interested individuals and organizations. If you would like to support this project financially or otherwise, please call Business & Economic Development Department manager Andrei Chakine at (907) 463-7121 or email him at achakine@ccthita.org.

Hello Governor,

If you're up to having the Colony team over after the game-

We could order pizzas and make some brownies, plus use up the left overs from the DOA reception. We have 3 boxes of brownie mix and Diane said she could make them Thursday, so they're ready to go. She really loves to bake and do that kind of stuff!

Just let me know what you and Molly decide- and we'll make sure it happens! :) If you want, I could just coordinate this with Molly.

Thanks for having us over for dinner, we really enjoyed spending time with you and your family! Your parent's home is definitely an Alaskan treasure!!! It was fun seeing the kids in their own stomping grounds. :)

The last time I spoke with Glen, he expressed no displeasure with any of your policies and commented that he thought you should be governor for eight years. I was completely surprised to read about his performance on the Fagan show. So, bottom line, nothing I can figure from my conversation with him would have precipitated the exchange with Fagan.

PS, It's finally sunny in Juneau. I'm going outside.

I-told-you-so is not the song of a good leader for Alaska

It's become painfully obvious why Andrew Halcro didn't win the election. Why in the world would Alaskans elect a person who takes such glee in the failure of the dairy and any other negative news regarding state issues? Rather than using his voice to propel us all forward with better ideas, Halcro is more concerned with being right and screaming "I told you so!" at the top of his lungs.

I fully support Palin's decision to investigate the state of the dairy and explore all options to keep it open if it was economically viable to do so. It would be irresponsible to do otherwise: Too many livelihoods are at stake.

Halcro still hasn't learned that Alaskans are tired of negative, embittered, "My way is the only way" divisive-style leadership. Many of us have great ideas, but few of us can lead. Halcro had no desire to lead, only to herd and be heard. We might listen if he had anything positive to contribute.

Dear Ms. Fritsch:

Governor Palin received your email correspondence regarding touch screen voting machines and asked that I reply to your concerns.

The security, accuracy and reliability of our voting systems are of utmost importance. The Division of Elections takes allegations, such as those presented in the Dan Rather special, very seriously.

As you may know, the Help America Vote Act of 2002 required states to have voting equipment in place that is accessible to the visually impaired and disabled by 2006. This is why states nationwide began implementing touch screen voting units. This federal requirement has not changed, and the State of Alaska must continue to follow this law.

The Division of Elections is in the process of reviewing our equipment as well as our security procedures as we prepare for the 2008 Primary and General Elections. We are also taking the added steps of seeking a third party review of our existing voting systems and security procedures.

You mention HR811, also known as the Holt bill, which establishes additional federal requirements for election systems. There has been significant opposition to this legislation and it is currently stalled for the time being in the House Rules Committee. Members of the committee have also expressed concerns with the current version of the bill. The last I heard is that that the earliest it could be scheduled for another hearing is tomorrow, September 12.

As you know, the Holt bill requires that the touch screen voting units be equipped with a voter verifiable paper audit trail and requires auditing procedures of election results. Although the State of Alaska's requirements do not exactly mimic those of the Holt bill, there are requirements for a paper trail and audit of election results in our state.

In Alaska, our touch screen voting units are equipped with a voter verifiable paper audit trail that allows a voter to review his or her ballot prior to it being cast on the voting unit. There are some states that do not have this requirement and utilize touch screen voting units that do not have a voter verifiable paper audit trail. Alaska also has paper ballots available at every polling place for those who do not want to use touch screen voting units to cast their vote. Fortunately, our state allows voters the choice on how they cast their ballot.

Additionally, there is a canvass of all election results statewide conducted by a bipartisan State Review Board prior to an election being certified. In addition to the review of election counts and materials from all polling places statewide by the bipartisan State Review Board, a hand count of one precinct in each of the 40 House Districts is conducted. The precinct is randomly selected from those precincts that comprise at least 5% of the total number of ballots cast in that House District. If the results of the hand count are off by more than 1% between the results of the hand count and the count certified by the election board, the entire House District will be recounted by hand count. The paper ballots for the optical scan machines and paper ballots on the touch screen machines serve as the official ballot cast and is the record that is hand counted. Once the State Review Board is confident that the results reported are accurate, the election is certified.

To learn more about Alaska's election process, visit the division's Web site at www.elections.state.ak.us. If you have specific suggestions on how we can improve elections in Alaska, please let me know. I am very interested in hearing how we can provide better service to Alaskans.

Sincerely,

Whitney Brewster, Director

Division of Elections

On the 14th of August, Dan Rather at http://hd.net/drr227.html had a report about the touch screen voting machines that would indicate serious flaws in these machines. They should all be returned for our money back or replaced with ones that really can be certified! Or sued!rnrnHR-811 is rumored to be going to the floor of the House for a vote on Wed. Sept. 5. They would not allow it to go for a vote unless they had the votes to pass it so, I imagine, it is now a done deal. However, suddenly we are being informed that those who were hoping for the benefits of the bill for 2008 are probably going to be disappointed. It seems that through the writing of the bill and three complete rewrites there is a funding problem. When the bill goes to the floor there will be a bipartisan "unfunded mandate" amendment that will be allowed to be voted on and added to the bill if it passes. This amendment will require action on the bill to be held up until funding can be appropriated; in othe!

r words 2010 or 2012 or never. So everything is status quo for 2008 (DREs, no vvpat, no audits) except no one can say if the non-funding portions of the bill would also be delayed. So the protection of the vendor's software may happen upon signature by the President. The vendors are protected while the voters get no protections. Sharon and I are very un-impressed with the editing Zencey did on my op-ed this morning. Rearranging paragraphs, eliminating references to the Big Three, chopping my intro paragraph, etc... I thought it certainly weakened the piece. Reminds me of the campaign when I'd try to get an op-ed published and they'd only agree to do so after hacking it.

Hopefully more ACES and AGIA pieces can more attractively explain our enery policy positions. Hopefully other op-eds will be submitted asap, as we need to step up with messaging to Alaskans today.

Hey will be delivering packets over today, and their press release will go out this afternoon. We'll have 45 days from today for the Governor to make her selection. Can we look ahead for a block of time for interviews so that the Governor's selection can be made by Oct 24th. This will be a week after the Special starts, so it could be fairly busy with press stuff. I'll shoot to have the bulk of research done by Oct 10th so we have some padding.

Coming down the pipe for Judges will be Fairbanks Superior and then the big one - Alaska Supreme Court.

John Gomes here. We met during the eagle release on Sunday.

As promised I have posted an album on line containing the images I shot.

The album can be found here:

http://johngomes.smugmug.com/gallery/3449496

The pass word for the album is: free

Please review the album and if you wish that any of the images be removed please let me know and I will do so. Once I have heard from you I will then remove the pass word and make the album public. At that point feel free to pass the link along to friends and family.

Just for information the email address you gave Britt and I did not work. Would you please include in your reply as I would like to have it on file.

Attached please find a copy of the image that I feel best represents the event.

I would just like to add it was a pleasure to meet you the other day.

Have a great day.

I like her!

PS, It's finally sunny in Juneau. I'm going outside.

I-told-you-so is not the song of a good leader for Alaska
It's become painfully obvious why Andrew Halcro didn't win the election. Why in the world would Alaskans elect a person who takes such glee in the failure of the dairy and any other negative news regarding state issues? Rather than using his voice to propel us all forward with better ideas, Halcro is more concerned with being right and screaming "I told you so!" at the top of his lungs.
I fully support Palin's decision to investigate the state of the dairy and explore all options to keep it open if it was economically viable to do so. It would be irresponsible to do otherwise: Too many livelihoods are at stake.
Halcro still hasn't learned that Alaskans are tired of negative, embittered, "My way is the only way" divisive-style leadership. Many of us have great ideas, but few of us can lead. Halcro had no desire to lead, only to herd and be heard. We might listen if he had anything positive to contribute.

Pretty amazing. Other than the student member, we have had one vacancy in the Board of Education. You selected Pat Shier, who is a huge supporter of homeschooling. I am sure Glen is a big fan of Pat's and if I remember correctly he recommended Pat for the position. The real question is whether the board or the legislature is the appropriate entity to make changes. Many board members feel that the legislature should clarify the law if additional direction is needed to the board. The issue also gets back to the homeschool questionnaire that was prepared during the campaign. I am sure Glen had a hand in that, knowing that the general questions asked were really intended to pin you down on specific proposals that are now being used against you.

Thanks for the update and sorry for the heartburn.

Mike

We have a new extradition request today from the State of Washington. We have a fugitive that has been charged with murder after he shot and killed another person over a fireworks dispute. Thanks.
